Sumayyah bint Khabbat

- Her position. An enslaved woman in Makkah, among the earliest people to accept the Prophet's message, with no family standing or protection to shield her.
- What she faced. Sustained pressure, over time, to publicly renounce what she had said — aimed at her and others like her specifically because they had no one to avenge them.
- What she did. Refused, consistently, every time she was asked, for as long as the pressure continued.
- Why she is remembered first. She is named across the sources as the first person killed for the refusal — the earliest martyr of the community.
- Why she is in this envelope. Sumayyah was the first person killed for refusing to give up her faith, and she did not give it up.

She died in Makkah, in the earliest years, for that refusal.

The One Who Would Not Say It

● is the grown-up · ○ is you · ●○ is together

- In the earliest years, before almost anyone had joined him, a small number of people had already said yes to the Prophet's message, out loud, in the open, where it could actually be heard by anyone passing.

○ Was that a dangerous thing to do?

- Very dangerous, in that city, at that particular time. Makkah's most powerful families did not want to hear it at all, and they went after the people with the least protection first — the poor, the enslaved, the ones nobody in the whole city would ever bother avenging.

○ Was Sumayyah one of those people?

- She was. An older woman, enslaved, with almost nobody standing between her and the men who wanted her, badly, to take the words back.

○ Did they actually try to make her take them back?

- Again and again, over a long stretch of time, often in front of others watching, so it would work as a warning to anyone else thinking of saying yes themselves.

THE ONE WHO WOULD NOT SAY IT • CONTINUED

◦ Did it work, all that pressure?

- No. She said the same thing every single time they asked her: no.

◦ Just no? Nothing more?

- Just no. Not a speech, not an argument laid out carefully for them to pick apart. The same one small word, held onto exactly as it was, for as long as it took, every single time.

◦ Could you say no that many times under pressure?
Say it out loud.

- Saying it once is easy enough to imagine, sitting safely here. Saying it the tenth time, the twentieth time, when nothing at all has changed and nobody is coming to help, is the actual test of it.

An illustration of a woman, Sumayyah bint Khabbat, wearing a dark purple hijab and a matching long-sleeved garment. She has a gentle smile and is looking directly at the viewer. She wears a gold necklace with small circular beads. The background is a stylized desert scene with a large yellow sun in the upper right, two palm trees on either side of a central white wall, and a blue body of water in the distance. The overall style is flat and modern.
